Instructions to paper presenters, chairs and discussants in parallel sessions

Paper presenters:
The conference committee would like paper presenters allocated to one particular room to stick together all day. By doing so we hope to get to know each other better, achieve a more workshop-like process, a fair chance to see commonalities and differences between contributions and discuss these. Please read in advance all the papers allotted to the same room as your own paper.

Chairs:
Your job as a chair of one of the parallel sessions is primarily to monitor time, say 10-15 minutes for presentations, 15-20 minutes for discussion, and insert breaks at convenient points in time. Presentations should start every hour and half-hour sharp. Secondly, you are expected to watch out for, and grab, opportunities that present themselves for raising discussions on commonalities and differences between contributions. It certainly helps if you have read all the papers in your room in advance.

Discussants:
Your job as a discussant of one of the papers is to read the paper you have been allotted, prepare and deliver your comments and take part in the discussion. If you have read all the papers of your room and day you could be particularly helpful in the process of identifying commonalities and differences between papers.
