All users of the University buildings have a responsibility to:

- Arrange his/her activities in such a way that fire is not easily ignited
To reduce the fire hazard it is forbidden to use candles and other forms of open flames in all University buildings, with the exception of controlled work in laboratories, churches, and on staffed serving desks where the restaurant has a license to sell alcohol.
- Get to know the fire precautions in the building. This will apply specially to fire exits and where extinguishers and fire alarms are placed.
- Not to damage the fire preventive precautions that have been implemented. This will apply specially to fire exits, fire alarm installations, emergency lighting, fire extinguishers, fire walls, fire doors.
- To report to the people responsible for the section/floor in case one discovers something wrong or deficient.
- To report all damages/accidents and “near-accidents” that have, or could have, led to fire or ignition. This should be reported on the standard form on the web pages for the HMS section.

All users have a duty to get to know the fire precautions in the building. This will apply specifically to fire exits and where fire extinguishers and fire alarms are placed.

In case of fire alarm:

- Follow the general fire instruction.
- Leave the building through the nearest fire exit, and once you are outside, do not stand close to the entrance door !!

I have read and understood my instruction as a user of the buildings at the University of Oslo (UiO).
